Bush sets Monday deadline for U.N. authorization

LAJES, Azores Islands (AP) — On the brink of war, President Bush and summit partners from Britain and Spain gave the United Nations a Monday deadline to endorse the use of force to compel Iraq's immediate disarmament. "Tomorrow is a moment of truth for the world," said Bush, commander-in-chief of 250,000 troops ringing Iraq and ready to act with or without U.N. approval. He spoke Sunday after an Atlantic island summit with British Prime Minister Tony Blair and Spanish Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar. Though the leaders pledged to seek compromise with U.N. foes through the night and all day Monday, they offered little hope of a diplomatic breakthrough. Even if a compromise plan somehow secured approval of a U.S.-Britain-Spain resolution at the U.N., it would delay military action only a week or so, officials said. Bush suggested the resolution might not even be put to a vote. "If Saddam refuses even now to cooperate fully with the United Nations, he brings on himself the serious consequences," the leaders said in a joint statement. They went on to list their plans for Iraq after hostilities, including repairing damage that might be caused by Saddam Hussein and preserving oil and other natural assets. The leaders gathered with more than 250,000 troops, a naval armada and an estimated 1,000 combat aircraft positioned in the Persian Gulf area, an American-led force ready to strike if and when the president gives the word. "The Iraqi regime will disarm itself or face war, probably within days, senior officials said. At a post-summit news conference, Bush urged other nations to support "the immediate and unconditional disarmament" of Iraq. France, Germany and Russia have opposed an additional United Nations resolution to set an ultimatum for the Iraqi leader to disarm — and the French have threatened to veto it. Efforts to win the votes of uncommitted nations at the U.N. Security Council have faltered in recent days. Blair, speaking with reporters on his plane en route to London, said British diplomats would work through the night to try to persuade France to lift its veto threat of a war resolution. At the United Nations, diplomats said it was unclear exactly what the United States, Britain and Spain wanted from the Security Council on Monday. France, unmoved by the summit, planned to push ahead with its proposal, a 30-day timetable for Iraq to meet disarmament tasks that would be set by chief U.N. weapons inspector Hans Blix. The plan doesn't include an ultimatum. Blair, under the most domestic pressure to get U.N. backing, accused the resolution's opponents of weakening the

SJPD begins citizen policing program

Editor's note: The Spartan Daily will be following the progress of the Citizens Police Academy through an ongoing project aimed at presenting the events of each week. This is the first part of a series titled "Citizens on duty," which is scheduled to run Mondays until May 4.

The San Jose Police Department offers a citizens police academy providing citizens and police an opportunity to work together. The 10-week academy meets each Wednesday, with some exceptions, at 6 p.m., at the Police Administration building located at 201 W. Mission St. Wednesday's meeting was focused in two areas. The first was community policing, taught by Officer Ron Daly, and the second, gang identification, was taught by Officer Bob Lobach. Officer Larry Ellsworth, who is heading the academy, said that by giving the community a chance to see how the police department operates, the department is able to form positive relationships with citizens. This is often the first step in community policing. Community policing is when there is personalized policing by the same officer patrols that work in the same area on a permanent basis, while working with the citizens to help identify and find solutions to problems.

Daly's presentation on community policing began with a short exercise designed to show the importance of teamwork in community policing. He said when the community works as a team with the police department, the department and the community can reduce crime.

Lobach's presentation on gangs held nothing back, and he said the presentation was the same as that given to police cadets.

The presentation taught citizens to identify gangs by the clothing gang members wear and the behavior they demonstrate. Lobach brought with him gang paraphernalia including gang clothing and weapons that he confiscated during the two preceding weeks at area high schools. He had enough paraphernalia to cover a 2 feet by 6 feet table-top.

Lobach showed images of slain gang members to demonstrate gang brutality to the participants of the academy.

Some participants were grateful that Lobach's presentation was straightforward and honest and that Lobach did not try to hide the brutality in gang violence.

members and babies dressed in gang colors. The babies, Lobach said, are born into the gang lifestyle with little hope of escaping. The Citizens Police Academy is scheduled to meet again this Wednesday to discuss police communications and patrol procedures with Carlos Valencia and Sgt. Gary Drake.

Officer Bob Lobach pulls a red bandanna out of a red backpack he confiscated from a gang member. The backpack was confiscated at a local high school and was filled with gang paraphernalia including brass knuckles and a homemade shank.

Elections for government, measures to be held Tuesday

By Falguni Bhuta
Daily Staff Writer

The leaders chosen during this year's Associated Students elections will be the ones walking the students through one of the worst economic crises in California history, said Alfonso De Alba, executive director of A.S.

The A.S. general elections will be held Tuesday and Wednesday at various locations on campus starting at 9 a.m., said Eric Velasquez, chief elections officer of the A.S. Elections Board.

A.S. is San Jose State University's student government and serves as the voice of students, according to A.S.

The A.S. government is divided into two branches: the executive, which is composed of the president, vice-president and the controller; and the legislative, which is made up of 13 directors.

This year, however, only 11 of the 13 legislative positions will be contested. The positions of director for extracurricular affairs and director of student rights and responsibilities have no candidates, Velasquez said. He also said the candidates who applied for these positions did not meet the eligibility standards required by the election board.

Velasquez said the newly elected board members would have the power to appoint and vote on the members for the two positions.

This year, only one party, the Spartan party, is a major participant in the elections. All of the other candidates are running independently.

De Alba said he thought all students should take this opportunity to vote and choose their representatives in the A.S. during this time of fee increases and cutting of services and classes.

"A university environment requires an outside classroom experience for students to make their degrees valuable," De Alba said.

Every semester, each matriculated student pays an A.S. Activity Fee of $73.50 which adds up to $3.7 million of the total $5 million yearly budget administered by the board of directors, De Alba said.

The rest of the money comes from revenue generated elsewhere, like grants, fees for services, revenue from the print shop and Child Development Center grants," De Alba said.

During the elections, students will also be able to vote on the three measures: Measure W, Measure X and Measure Y, Velasquez said.

Measure W is the campus smoking policy which the university's academic senate is considering to revise. The current SJSU policy, according to A.S., bans smoking within 15 feet off the entrance of campus buildings.

Measure W will attempt to gather students' opinions on whether smoking should be banned within five feet, 15 feet or 25 feet off entrances of campus buildings or to ban smoking on campus altogether.

Measure X is the University Hour measure. The University Hour is a period of time in the middle of the day when no classes will be taught and aims at benefiting the campus community by helping to create a campus life, according to A.S.

During the elections, students will have the opportunity to vote either for or against the University Hour.

How to vote

To vote in the Spring 2003 General Elections you must be a matriculated, currently enrolled student at SJSU and have paid the Associated Students fee, according to A.S. If you are enrolled at SJSU through continuing education or Open University, you are not eligible to vote. To vote in the Spring 2003 general election you will need:

Your Tower Card A valid Spring 2003 enrollment sticker
Polling locations and times
1. Sweeney Hall	9 a.m. to 8 p.m.
2. Clark Library	9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
3. Student Union (Art Quad)	9 a.m. to 8 p.m.
4. 9th Street (in front of Career Center)	9 a.m. to 2.30 p.m.

Measure Y is the fee referendum measure. The Academic Senate proposed a $39 fee increase to support several departments on campus that are dependent on student fees and are in financial trouble because of the current budget crisis.

The different fees that compose the $39 fee increase are the academic fee, the athletic fee, the Student Health Center fee, the Student Union fee, the Child Care Center fee, the Campus Recreation Program fee, and the A.S. General fee, according to A.S. Students will be able to cast their votes on whether to support this fee increase.

Measure W and X are advisory votes only, which means the overall advice of the student votes will be considered,

De Alba said. "The final decision about these two measures lies with the Academic Senate and the president," De Alba said. "The outcome of the votes will advise the president on what he should implement."

Preeti Deshpande, a graduate student in economics from India, said she was not going to vote in the upcoming elections.

"It's more to do with the fact that I'm indifferent, and it's not relevant for me," she said. "As an international student, you don't feel involved in campus affairs."

Deshpande said as a graduate student she comes to campus, attends classes,

Tips on how to thrive and survive while in college

College. The step one is expected to take after high school and the final frontier before one's career.

For me, this wonderful little time in my life is almost over. But before I can graduate, I have to complete three freshman-laced classes as well as other upper division requirements.

The semester has been fun, and in some classes, when the underclassmen find out I am the lone, or one of a handful, graduating senior in the class the same question seems to come up: "What kind of advice can you give me so that I might one day be in your position?"

Don't get me wrong, I am not the expert on college. Hell, I know people who have been in college for almost 10 years, but I do have some advice for underclassmen.

For starters, if you're reading this before 10 a.m., you've probably already broken the first rule — no classes before 10:30 a.m.

Even though college is a free community in the sense that you can come and go as you please, class attendance is crucial. So unless you are a student with a GPA higher than 3.0, in a position where your schedule requires you to take the early classes, or are prepared to explain to your professor why you miss at least one session a week, I'd suggest you stay away from those 7 a.m. and 9 a.m. classes.

While we are in the mode of classroom, let's discuss classroom etiquette.

Now I too was a freshman many moons ago and know what it is like to feel as if you are free to do whatever you want, but believe me, as you get older, you start to notice how annoying little brats can be.

In a few of my classes, there are people who love to bitch and moan about how boring the class is and how they'd rather be elsewhere.

A word to the wise: If you don't want to be in class, then don't go.

I sure as hell don't want to hear you complaining about how the war in Iraq and the speeches from the president bother you because it interferes with your television viewing habits.

Others around you don't want to listen to you jabbering about the party you attended last night and how your older friend got you and your under-aged buddies a six-pack of Pabst Blue Ribbon and a carton of American Spirit cigarettes.

And your professor sure doesn't appreciate the fact that your incessant talking is affecting his or her ability to implant some knowledge in the heads of the youth of America.

Along with the chatting, please, for heaven's sake, turn off your cell phones. We know you have a cute little alert when you have an incoming call, but don't you think you should have told your friends and family when your classes are so they won't call you during that time?

And because that is a high school tactic to show people how cool you are, let's talk about wardrobe.

This isn't high school, people. You don't have to have every single new piece of fashion to be cool.

I am all for self-expression, but when you find yourself not buying books for your class so you can have the latest pair of basketball shoes or halter top, then you have to wonder: What am I doing here?

In high school, people fit in because of what they wore. College is different.

You fit in with everyone as long as you don't shelter yourself from the rest of the class. A person wearing some Enyce gear can get along with a guy wearing a Metallica shirt, who then gets along with the guy in the polo and khakis as well as the girl in the back of the room wearing some pajamas.

A current wardrobe is good, just don't make it the hub of your entire being.

I suppose the same can be said for your transportation.

If you are fortunate enough to live close to a bus line that comes to our campus and your schedule allows it, I'd recommend taking public transportation.

You have all heard the horror stories of parking here at San Jose State University, and I've got another one for you.

First day of college, Fall 1998, I had a class at 10:30 a.m. I got here at 10 a.m. figuring 30 minutes early would suffice. I was wrong. I tried every garage on campus as well as those around.

No parking. No class. No fun. No joke.

My last pieces of advice are to get involved in some sort of group (fraternity, club, newspaper ... etc.), read the newspaper — both the Spartan Daily and a local paper — don't create stupid Web sites with pictures of you posing with guns and finally, take part in the democratic process.

Becoming part of something is crucial. There is no worse feeling than going through college alone. Having a group of people who can relate and support you is priceless.

Reading the newspaper will keep you informed on foreign and domestic issues, which your professors are likely to discuss. And on that note, if you're reading the newspaper in the bathroom, please leave it in a dry spot for the next person.

Voting in Associated Students elections is important, no matter what you think of student government. And as for the Web sites, well, isn't that an obvious one?

College should be fun. Don't make it a living nightmare for yourself — or others around you.

Presidential candidate assumes incorrectly

Dear Editor,

Presidential candidate Arash Shokouh recently took a swipe at the Impact party by incorrectly assuming that because we were not running in this year's election, we were somehow "only interested in accomplishing our own goals" last year. He seemed to wonder where so many students committed to serving students had gone. Please allow me to fill him in.

Many of our Impact members have moved on to bigger and much better things than the soiled kitty litter box that A.S. politics continues to be. Some members are serving internships in San Jose city government, some are pursuing master's programs at other schools, some are pursuing Law school acceptance, and still others are focusing their considerable talent and energies to their larger communities through volunteer work.

As for Mr. Shokouh's "goals," as I recall, he ran last year on a platform consisting of one solitary issue: a desire to ban credit card companies from soliciting students on campus. After an entire year, has Mr. Shokouh been successful in his goal? The answer is no.

All of the Spartan party candidates loved to talk about "giving a voice to students" and yet, as anyone who attends A.S. meeting knows well, they never yield time to hear students who bother to attend their meetings and are not interested in listening to anyone who has an opinion other than their own.

How sad it is that on a campus of 28,000 students, our choice for president is no choice at all. Good luck to you, Mr. Shokouh. I hope that you accomplish all of your "goals" this year — but remember, if you run unopposed, you're not really "elected," you merely "assume the position."

Associated Students needs to grow up and do its job

An interesting, yet not surprising, turn of events last week saw the Associated Students board of directors pass a resolution that gave a vote of "no confidence" in A.S. president Maribel Martinez.

The resolution says Martinez failed to comply with many of the duties assigned to the president, and basically labeled her incompetent.

How interesting it is when the kettle calls the pot black.

I'm not involved with A.S., so I'm not going to pass judgement on who's doing the best job within that area of student government. If Martinez has continuously missed meetings and failed to make appointments to fill vacancies, then the case can definitely be made that she isn't pulling her weight.

But it's rather ironic when the people who are passing judgement on her performance are the very people who seek to make her job as difficult to do as possible.

Anyone who has been to an A.S. meeting knows what I am talking about.

What is supposed to be a gathering of student leaders who are given the task of deciding on important matters relating to student affairs, including managing millions of student dollars, usually turns into a scene of immature bickering.

There have been two main groups during the last two years, the Spartan party and the Impact party, who exist seemingly just to oppose each other.

It doesn't really matter what the issue is. If one of those groups supports a cause or a person, the other will no doubt oppose it.

And with a board of directors consisting mainly of Spartan party folks and a president that's a member of Impact, it's easy to see how the board would readily pass a pointless motion criticising the president two months before her term is up.

Either they have nothing better to discuss at their meetings, or they are more concerned with publicly blasting someone they choose not to cooperate with rather than dealing with pertinent matters.

I'm leaning toward the latter.

They say she hasn't filled A.S. board vacancies. That, of course, is a difficult task when the rest of the board will not approve of a candidate simply because of who nominated the person.

They also accused her of being missing in action during times of important A.S. meetings.

Ironically, since Academic Senate Chair James Brent says the same goes for many of those board members who voted in favor of this resolution.

DRAY MILLER

In fact, Brent, who is probably the top authority on issues relating to student government at San Jose State University, considers A.S. dysfunctional as a whole, and feels its members are more concerned with political parties than the students.

Sounds like just the kind of people I want controlling $6 million of our money.

Of course, these opinions aren't shared just by the Academic Senate chair or an editorial staff of the campus newspaper.

Last semester's editorial staff was able to meet personally with President Caret to discuss various matters within the SJSU community last year.

During the meeting we managed to share a chuckle at the immature manner in which A.S. members treat each other.

I dare say that the lowly 10 percent turnout during last year's A.S. elections was due in large part to the fighting, smearing and name-calling that plagued the elections, which likely turned off many potential voters, who probably opted to not vote for anyone rather than pick between the lesser of two evils.

Fortunately, there's a new breed of student leaders rising through the ranks that hopefully aren't following the lead of the people who have brought A.S. to this time of dysfunction.

Perhaps these new potential leaders, many of whom are currently running in the coming A.S. elections, are still motivated by what I assume originally generated their interest in being a part of A.S.: a desire to serve the needs and interests of students.

If that's the case, then brighter days should be ahead for our student body. With any luck, we might even see the day that most SJSU students are actually aware of A.S. and care about the job they are doing.

So here's where my responsible pitch comes in: It's time to get off our asses, pay attention to these elections and get the proper students in office, so we don't have to deal with these meaningless resolutions that amount to nothing more than a public declaration of a group's personal opinion of one person.

Or the rest of the student body can go about their apathetic ways, ignorantly bitching about the fees we pay and services we get.

Starting tomorrow, the ball is in our court.

The San Jose State University gymnastics team lost to No. 2 Arizona State University Friday by a score of 197.300-193.550 in Tempe, Ariz.

The SJSU softball team won its third game in a row Friday after defeating the University of Southern Utah, 2-1.

Both of the Spartans' runs came in the top of the sixth inning after SJSU's Veronica Ramos was hit by a pitch, bringing in teammate Becca Baldridge, to tie the game at 1-1. Elisia Barrios would give SJSU the victory, scoring the winning run off a Heather Lopez ground ball.

Spartan pitcher Carol Forbes, who allowed the Thunderbirds four hits and lone run, went the distance and brought her record to 6-6.

As a team, SJSU brought its record to 10-15.

A second game between the Spartans and the Thunderbirds that was slated for Saturday was cancelled because of rain and will not be rescheduled.

The Spartans return to action today with a 1 p.m. scheduled start against the University of Utah at the SJSU Field.

SPARTAN ROUNDUP

The closest the Spartans came to winning an event was tying for third place on the uneven bars and on the floor. Shirla Choy scored a 9.900 on the bars, tying with ASU's Maggie Germaine. The top finisher for the Spartans was Dani Albright who scored a 9.825 on the floor tying with the Sun Devils' Tiffany Van Dusen for third on the event.

Though SJSU lost the meet, the team score tied for the 10th best in school history.

Giants choose Rueter as starter for opening day

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Kirk Rueter will be the opening day starter for the San Francisco Giants.

The left-hander will pitch March 31 at San Diego, followed by right-hander Jason Schmidt.

"As long as I'm pitching once every five days," the 32-year-old Rueter said Sunday. "It's not like they're naming a starting quarterback. It's fun, but it's one start in 33."

The other three spots most likely will go to right-hander Livan Hernandez, lefty Damian Moss and probably Kurt Ainsworth or Ryan Jensen.

Manager Felipe Alou said the decisions have been made but not the order in which to pitch them. Alou is not a manager set on alternating lefties and righties.

"We're going to wait to the last minute," Alou said.

Rueter went 14-8 last season with a 3.23 ERA in 33 starts for the defending NL champions. He became the first Giants' lefty to win at least 10 games in six straight seasons since Johnny Antonelli from 1954-59.

Rueter has a 109-68 career record, and the Giants won 75 percent of his starts last year, going 25-8.

Alou said the decision on Rueter was made Sunday morning. Alou, who managed Rueter in Montreal, said there wasn't one determining factor.

"His won-loss record lifetime and what he means to this club," Alou said. "Schmidt is deserving, too. You can only have one guy."

Schmidt was 13-8 in 2002 with a 3.45 ERA, winning two postseason games as the Giants' post-season World Series for the first time since 1989. Schmidt beat St. Louis once in the NL championship series and won Game 1 of the World Series against eventual champion Anaheim.

"I'm happy for him," Schmidt said. "He deserves it. He's a quality guy and a quality pitcher. We all get the same amount of starts, so it's really not a big deal."

Rueter agreed in spring training to a two-year, $12 million contract extension that runs through 2005.

Spartan baseball team wins two

By Tammy Krikorian
Daily Staff Writer

Despite intermittent rain on Sunday, the Spartan baseball team managed to win its first Western Athletic Conference series of the season, defeating the University of Nevada-Reno, 4-2, and took the series 2-1.

Right-handed junior Carlos Torres pitched a complete game, striking out six batters and walking three, one which was hit by a pitch, and gave up nine hits and two runs.

Nevada was first to score when second baseman Ryan Strain singled to left field, sending designated hitter Tony Cappuccilli home in the second inning.

The Wolf Pack advanced again in the fourth inning when right fielder Chris Gimenez hit a home run to left center. The Spartans went into the fifth inning down 2-0, but took control of the game.

With left fielder Markum King on third and designated hitter Mark Bautista on second, first baseman Jordan Bergstrom flew out to right field and King scored.

An error by Nevada helped Bautista score and a double to left center by shortstop Anthony Contreras sent home second baseman David Pierson, who had reached base on a fielder's choice.

"They made a mistake, and we capitalized it," Pierson said.

Third baseman Nathan Corrick singled to right field, sending Contreras home and bringing the score to 4-2.

While the Spartans were unable to score again, a strong defense prevented the Wolf Pack from recapturing the lead.

Including a double play turned by Contreras, Pierson and Bergstrom in the top of the sixth and a diving catch by Pierson in the top of the eighth to stop a ground ball and throw out Nevada third baseman Kevin Kouzmanoff at first base.

Corrick also contributed, catching some tough balls in center field.

The game improved the Spartans' record to 12-9 overall and 2-1 WAC.

The first game of the series, originally scheduled for Friday, was rained out, forcing the two teams to play a doubleheader Saturday.

In the first game, Spartan pitcher Matt Durkin gave up the first home run of his college career, a two run shot by Nevada left fielder Erick Streelman. The Wolf Pack hit two more home runs to score three runs, giving Nevada the first game 5-1.

SJSU won the second game 4-3 in the eleventh inning when Contreras scored from third base off a bunt by Jon Heurman.

"I don't think anyone works harder at defense than we do," said SJSU assistant coach Doug Thurman. "I really want to credit the defense. Nate Corrick is a tremendous player."

"The shining moment of this series is that we had no errors," he said, adding that his defense made some tremendous plays that saved innings. Torres agreed.

"Our defense came up clutch in a lot of situations," Torres said. Pierson, however, gave credit to Torres. "They kind of jumped us a little bit," he said. "But our pitcher stayed consistent and gave us an opportunity to win."

The Spartans will play again tonight against the University of Minnesota and Tuesday night against the University of San Francisco. Both games are scheduled for 7 p.m. at Municipal Stadium.

Of playing two more games after a three game series Thurman said, "Pitching is the toughest to manage when you have five games in a row. Our pitching staff is going to be asked to muster up some energy. We've got a lot of innings to fill and our pitching staff isn't huge to begin with. You might see some guys you haven't seen before."

Vice Presidential Candidates

By Rebecca Villaneda
Daily Staff Writer

Vice presidential candidate William Chang said he sees a lot of potential in Associated Students and wants to help facilitate equal representation on the board.

"I chose to run independent because I thought taking a side would be horrible," he said. "If I was biased, I didn't think I would make a good chair."

The A.S. vice president serves as the chair of the board of directors and is the liaison between the legislative and executive branches, according to A.S.

"The vice president runs A.S. meetings, and it is their duty to keep structured meetings and call things out of order," he said.

He said he believes in rules and wants to bring his knowledge to A.S. He said running a fair meeting is his area of expertise.

Chang has been involved with the Inter Residence Hall Association for about two years. The association is the government for San Jose State University residence halls and Chang has held the positions of treasurer, historian, vice president and president. He said working with the association is his backbone as he approaches A.S.

"With (IRHA), I was able to learn about motivating people," he said. "We worked with a budget, activity fees and organized events."

He said the biggest problem he sees in government is the transition phase organizations go through.

"I see people leave without passing on their experience and knowledge," he said. "I want to create a handbook with simple basics for entering positions — like an established written tradition."

There is a stipend each member of the board receives as an A.S. board member, and Chang said he was considering giving it up and thinking of other routes to spend that money. He said he was talked out of that because many people told him the money might be going to entities that didn't deserve it.

He said some obstacles he may face if elected are the fight to increase student involvement as well as the budget. However, he said he is hopeful.

"Each year, I have different emotions toward A.S., but this time I see more cooperation and willingness to interact with one another," he said. "I believe in cooperative problem solving."

Chang said risk taking should be involved as well as being proactive in areas such as visiting different student organizations to recruit.

"I myself will visit student organizations and recruit students to join the many committees held under A.S., and not just during the campaigning period of elections," he said. "The best way to do this is to circulate — attend their orientations and use all connections."

The A.S. title, Chang said, can be beneficial because it has the title and people tend to listen and respect it.

"It's not just the ordinary student role, with this position people will listen more," he said. "That way we can write more letters and have more access to researching matters that concern the student body."

Chang's perception of A.S. has been negative in the past, he said, but he sees the potential, it still has to develop.

"For different issues, people form coalitions," Chang said. "I don't want to deal with close-minded people, although they have that right, but in the positions of A.S., people should be open. That is why I think this is the key time for me to step up with a fresh voice."

By Rebecca Villaneda
Daily Staff Writer

Alice M. Lee is currently the controller in Associated Students and is now running for vice president.

She said her father has always told her to stick to her beliefs and morals.

"It wasn't so much politics that got me involved with A.S.," she said. "I was a concerned student that saw faults, and I knew that if I wanted to address these concerns, I had to get in the inside."

Lee, a senior double majoring in marketing and finance, said she sees the college years as an important time in a person's life. She said, coming in as a freshman to San Jose State University, she saw a lack of student life and wanted to work at creating a better atmosphere on campus. She said, visiting other campuses, she saw students playing volleyball and just hanging out on lawns.

"I joined A.S. because of those concerns," Lee said. "The liaison between administrators and students is there and automatic. We have that benefit to have a voice, otherwise we'd have to go through secretaries and such to communicate with administrators, letting them know our ideas and concerns."

She said the politics in politics is what brings conflict into A.S. There is a game to be played, and unfortunately in that arena, she has no choice. For example, the elections, she said, serve as an obstacle in themselves.

"My opposition, great candidate, but I have a lot more experience," she said.

This will be Lee's third year with A.S. if elected as vice president. She has served as director of campus advising affairs and director of governing affairs. "Chang is running for an executive position for his first time when a director's position is enough pressure," Lee said.

"I have book shelves filled with binders of information that I have obtained over the years," Lee said. "He cannot expect to acquire all that information in months."

Since she has been with A.S. for the last two years, Lee said there is unfinished business she wants to tend to in the upcoming term.

"There is the parking situation, tuition, fees, class time and space as well as other projects we have pending," she said. "Like the e-mail system for students, an informational handbook for incoming students that tells them the happenings on or off campus."

Lee said there are many concerns that students have, and all those matters deserve attention, it is just a matter of what is of greater importance.

She said she wishes people could see the passion behind A.S. members as they discuss ideas and create task forces.

"We are a forceful group, and we know how students feel when they are asking us what we are doing for them," Lee said. "We want the same things they do, and it is frustrating when we get stonewalled by administrators, because then we have to go back and do it to the students."

Lee said she wants to encourage students to run and get involved if they want to see change on campus. She said she always felt the best way to do things is to get in on the inside.

"I want to hear diverse voices and opinions," she said. "I also want to make sure all members are getting along knowing that there will be a difference in opinions."

"We hear the students," she said. "We know their concerns, and we as A.S. are in the position to do what we can in so much time."

Presidential Candidate

By Wendy Lopez
Daily Staff Writer

Arash Shokouh, current Associated Students director of student fee affairs, is running for student government president in this spring's elections.

"Being involved in A.S. requires balanced sacrifice," Shokouh said. "Time spent with family, friends and homework cannot be satisfactorily done at once."

Committing time to several organizations, school responsibilities and a social life fluctuates on a weekly basis, he said.

"I never want to shorthand one or the other," Shokouh said.

All of the candidates work intensely during elections week, he said. Everyone puts forth a maximum amount of effort to ensure students know which candidates are running for A.S. positions.

"You have to put your all toward the end of campaigning," Shokouh said. "Everyone works harder and longer, making the most of their leadership positions."

Shokouh said his father has impacted his ability to become a leader in a number of organizations.

"My dad's openness has influenced me in the way I handle (different issues)," Shokouh said. "Because of him, I always have an open mind and good humor."

His father's teaching of approaching work as "laid back fun" is what helps him strengthen his positive attitude and has helped him excel in a number of achievements, Shokouh said.

Representing the student population and working with several campus organizations is not solely politics, he said.

"Participating in A.S. means having the opportunity to work with other leaders to better change the school," Shokouh said. "Leaders are in a position of influence where student concern can change rules and regulations within the university."

Taking initiative and knowing there is going to be change is what makes A.S. gratifying, he said.

"Seeing individual leadership abilities grow, and watching program coordination skills increase, is extraordinary," Shokouh said.

Stopping credit card vendors from harassing students sparked Shokouh's political interest. Taking the extra step to say credit card vending on campus is a problem and seeing the problem get fixed is the motivation behind making a difference, he said.

Arash Shokouh

Shokouh said A.S. government procedures could be creative.

"Procedural bylaws and rules within A.S. are open to interpretation, leaving an enormous amount of room for creativity," Shokouh said.

If the board of directors wanted to move a meeting from the A.S. conference room to the amphitheater outside of the Student Union to increase student knowledge about government, it could, he said.

A two-thirds majority vote among board members is needed to approve this and other forms of achievable jurisdictions, Shokouh said.

"Unspoken words at board meetings can affect (on-going matters)," Shokouh said. "What goes on behind the scenes affects everyone." Rumors and multiple interpretations of an incident make it difficult to believe what is true, he said.

Shokouh said he believes good policy decision-making involves A.S. government working with student input. Students can help make changes by representing the campus community, he said.

The Spartan party wants to create a system where departmental and campus information "is made by the student for the student," he said.

Shokouh resigned as president of the Pars Persian club to run for A.S. president and is now the public relations officer for the club.

Controller Candidate

By Wendy Lopez
Daily Staff Writer

From lobbying against fee increases to overseeing budget affairs and reviving campus concerts, Rachel Greathouse continues her campus involvement legacy by running for A.S. Controller.

"As controller, I want to make sure student fees are spent in ways that benefit the student," Greathouse said.

More space and resources for student organizations needs to be provided, she said.

In the past, Greathouse was treasurer for the Recreation Student Association and budget coordinator for Hoover Residence Hall government.

Greathouse said she has been involved with several other campus organizations.

"I have served on San Jose State University's orientation program and as vice president of marketing for Alpha Phi sorority and served on the Internal Affairs Committee of the California State Student Association," Greathouse said.

Majoring in leadership and administration in recreation has helped Greathouse realize her passion for management, she said.

"When I first was involved in recreation leadership, I knew that I liked helping in recreation but coordinating an event was something I wanted to do," Greathouse said.

Working on A.S. has been a personal goal since she was an incoming freshman, she said.

Networking, hearing an individual's input and fixing problems were what made A.S. exciting, she said.

"Being able to meet with the California State University system and share my ideas is why I love being involved in A.S.," Greathouse said.

Greathouse said her mother's involvement in politics has influenced her political liking ever since she was a child.

While A.S. can be fun, the government system has its drawbacks, she said.

"Conflicts between people and everyone having their own idea can sometimes be difficult," Greathouse said. "Having a lot of ideas can make it hard to compromise with the people you are working with."

A lack of student volunteers and student input is also troublesome, she said.

The shortage of candidate opposition has made campaigning in this year's elections easier than last year's, Greathouse said.

"Elections can get complicated when there are a lot of campaign duties needing to be assigned," she said.

Rachel Greathouse

Appointing managers and assigning campaigning tasks can get complex, Greathouse said. Student involvement is also needed, she said.

"Students are not involved with the many organizations on campus," Greathouse said.

"They do not understand how important it is to get involved," she said

Having a low number of students participating on campus affects the number of student appointments onto A.S. committees and how much work is going to get completed, she said.

Greathouse said that making new policies means "going above and beyond major achievements" and getting students interested in their campus.

Isai Pizano, a senior majoring in materials engineering, also said he wasn't going to vote. He said he had a particularly busy semester and had to spend all his time studying and attending classes.

alliance against Saddam.

"I have to say that I really believe that had we given that strong message some time ago, Saddam might have realized that the games had to stop," the prime minister said.

Aznar, the prime minister of Spain, where millions of protesters staged rallies Friday, said he was not dissuaded by dissent.

"We are well aware of the international world public opinion, of its concern, and we are also very well aware of our responsibilities and obligations," Aznar said.

Portugal Prime Minister Jose Durao Barroso called the Azores summit "the last chance of a political solution. It may be a small chance but if there is only one chance in a million it's worth trying this opportunity."

Far from this lush Portuguese archipelago, Saddam warned that if Iraq is attacked, it would take the war anywhere in the world "wherever there is sky, land or water."

Though Blix was working on details of a plan envisioning that inspections would continue for months — he was to present it to the Security Council on Tuesday — inspectors flew most of their helicopters out of Iraq. Germany advised its citizens to leave the country immediately.

Bush was expected to issue a similar warning to humanitarian workers and journalists in his upcoming speech, dubbed "the ultimatum address" inside the White House.

The president laid the choice at Saddam's feet.

"The decision is his to make. It's been his to make all along, as to whether or not there's the use of military," the president said. "He got to decide whether he's going to disarm, and he didn't. He can decide whether he wants to leave the country."
